Chiropractic is the name of a systematized knowledge of the science of life- biology, and a methodical comprehension and application of adjusting anatomical displacements, the cause of biological abnormalities; also an explanation of the methods used to relieve humanity of suffering and the prolonging of life, thereby making this stage of existence much more efficient in its preparation for the next step- the life beyond.

The Science, Art and Philosophy of Chiropractic - Pamer ...

THE ART, SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY OF CHIROPRACTIC The Science: Chiropractic is based on the scientific and anatomical fact that the central nervous system (CNS) that includes your brain and spinal cord, initiate control of the function of every cell, tissue, organ and system of your body. Your body is much like the Internet: your brain is your main frame computer, your spinal cord is the information highway, your spinal vertebrae are the protective housing in which the CNS sits.

Chiropractic is not a science, but that doesn't mean that nothing they do is based on science. There is evidence that spinal manipulation therapy is effective for some kinds of low back pain. It is no more effective than other treatments for low back pain, but is a viable option for patients who prefer it.

Chiropractic is a natural healthcare profession underpinned by three basic tenants of science, art and philosophy. Many people seek chiropractic care for a variety of neuromusculoskeletal problems and have great success. The reason for this is that the unique approach and treatment goal is to improve optimal nervous system function, allowing the brain and body to better coordinate health in response to its internal and external environment.
